It was late afternoon in Emily’s classroom. The last students had gone home.
Emily lingered by a desk, drawing small shapes on a scrap of paper.
The room felt quiet, and she missed having a friend to share the afternoon.

Then two bright blue eyes appeared in the shadow beneath the teacher’s desk.
Emily crouched to look without startling their owner.
A small white cat carefully poked its head into view.

Emily held out her hand, palm upward. She waited.
The cat, Whiskers, took a slow step forward and sniffed her fingers.
Emily smiled. Neither of them had to hurry.
